OWE their origin to an impure state of the blood, the urinary and digestive organs being first to suffer. Therefore, medicines that will strengthen these organs and at the same time cleanse and purify and renew the blood, will have a tendency to cure the majority of human ailments. Such & remedy is Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, and, although producing no active cathartic or diuretic effect, its use will soon establish a painless regularity of urinary and digestive functions. It has long ago proven itself a specific for scrofula and other syphilitic disorders, curing such diseases even when all other treatment, including Hot Springs, failed. A great point in its favor is that it contains no mercury or any mineral poisons, and will never harm the most delicate constitution. It merely makes one feel buoyant and rids the system of blood impurities and other internal and external indications of failing health.

Why? Why? Why?

IS it that so many neglect coughs and colds until they get consumption? Why is it that so many die of consumption? It is because they will not come and be healed. Every one knows a sure conqueror of throat and lung diseases is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, and that it is obtainable throughout the length and breadth of our land. Reader, if you suffer, hasten and procure a bottle. It is pleasant to take and never fails to give satisfaction. A single dose will cure an ordinary cough. A few bottles will cure consumption if taken in time.

Guysott's Sarsaparilla and Wistar's Balsam sold in Hillsboro by Seybert & Co. and W. R. Smith & Co.

Tariff Literature for all.

The American Protective Tariff League is publishing a most valuable series of tariff documents. These are prepared with a view not only to state the facts and arguments for protection, but also to convince doubtful voters, whether they are farmers, laborers, merchants or professional men. Each issue of the series appeals to those engaged in separate industries, and presents indisputable facts, comparisons of wages, cost of living, and other arguments showing the benefits of protection. Recent issues include the following:

ets Concerning the Life of Bloses from Its Opening to Its Close - The Underlying Secret of His Power - Suggestions for Christian Living

[Specially arranged from S. S. Quarterly.]
LESSON TEXT—Deut. 34: 1-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—The path of the just is the shining light, that shininth more and more unto the perfect day.—Prov. 4:18.
CENTRAL TRUTH—"Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like

Time—Moses died during the first week of the tweifth month of the fortieth year of the exodus; i. e., the latter part of February, Place—Moses died on Mount Pisgah, the highest peak of Mount Nebo, a short dis-tance northeast of the head of the Dead Sea. The Israelites were encamped on the plains east of the lower end of the Jordan, north of the Dead Sea.

Mosas—One hundred and twenty years old, born near Zoan, in Egypt, B. C. 1571. Father, Amram; mother, Jochebed; of the tribe of Levi. First forty years in Leypt, next forty in Arabia: married Zipporal; died on Mount Nebo, B. C. 1451.

INTERVENING HISTORY—After our last lesson the Israelites soon left Kadesh for their last year's journey in the wilderness. They wished to go eastward just south of the Dead Sea, but the Edomites would not let Dead Sea, but the Edomites would not let-them. They journeyed in a southeast di-rection to the head of the eastern arm of the Red Sea, then turned northward on the eastern side of the great valley called the Arabah, conquered the nations east of the Jordan, and settled down in the valley of the Jordan, opposite Jericho. It was now winter, toward the close of the fortieth year since the exodus.

INTRODUCTION — Moses' time had come when he must die. Then, in a series of three addresses during the eleventh month, from the middle of January to the middle from the middle of January to the middle of February, he recounts to them the law. These addresses, with his song (chap. 32) and blessing the tribes (chap. 32), make up the Book of Deuteronomy, except the last chapter, in which some other inspired writer gives the account of Moses' death.

HELPS OVER HARD PLACES-1. Nebo: one of the largest mountains of the Moabite range east of the Jordan and Dead Sea. The top (or summit) of Pisgah: the highest peak of Nebo. Guead: the fertile country cast of the Jordan. Dan an unknown city in Gilead. Naphtali: the country west of the sea of Galilee. Ephraim and Manasch: the middle hill country of Palestine. Utmost, or farthest; f. c. Western Sea—the Mediterranean. 3. The south: the south country—the southern region of Palestine. 6. Beth-peor: the house or temple of Peor, a Mosbite idol, on Mount Nebo. 9. Moses had laid his hands upon him imparting authority and divine influences (see Num. 27: 18:23). Hearkened unto hime accepted him as their Hearkened unto him: accepted him as their leader.

I. Mosas was the greatest of the prophets, because (1) none had such perfect and direct communion with God; (2) none spoke God's word so fully and originally; (3) none worked such mighty miracles; (4) none had so marked an influence upon the kingdom of God. II. Moses was a great statesman, a wonderful organizer, the source of more good and wise laws than any other more good and wise laws than any other person, the maker of a new era in govern-ment. III. Moses was a great general, both in carrying on war and in seeking to avoid it when possible. He never suffered a defeat. IV. Moses was a great writer,—a historian, a biographer, a poet. V. Moses was great in character. He was a most consecrated man.

Communts—The first forty years of the life of Moses were spent in greatluxury. In this he might have remained had he so chosen. He had been adopted into the family of the king, and there he could have stayed all his life. But he had a strong attachment to his people, and for their sakes he was willing to give up all this advantage of position. For their sakes he was willing to cease being called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, and to suffer affliction with the people of God. This was truly a grand spirit, and one of which the world sees none too much. It was as though a man in our times were willing to give up a fortune of poor man, and go down from a brown-stone front to a rear basement in a forlorn tene front to a rear basement in a forlorn tenement house, for the sake of those whom he wanted to help. This was as great as his spirit of self-sacrifice. All through his experience with the people he was called upon to exercise this spirit. Even before they had loft the land of Egypt they murmured against him and found fault. Had he then acted as many of us would have done, he would have said to them: "If this is the way you take my efforts in your behalf, I will leave you to your fate, and return to my comfortable quarters at the court." But he bore their grumbling first and last with bore their grumbling first and last with even spirit, and did the best he could with them, always looking out for their advantage. In later days God once offered to age. In later days God once once the sabandon the people, and establish a house for Moses himself; but though the people had provoked Moses sorely, he rejected the offer, and pleaded for the people so that God heard his prayer and was gracious to

However alluring the luxuries of the However alturing the luxines of the Egyptian court were, he looked beyond them and saw God. However the people may have tempted him to give up the battle, he looked far over the things of the present time, and saw that which laid beyond. It was this second sight that gave him his courage, and enabled him to be more than congrery over the things of time min his courage, and enabled him to be more than conqueror over the things of time and sense. However great the difficulties in the way, whether Red Seas, deserts, famines, enemies, murmuring people, they were all nothing to Moses, because his gaze famines, enemies, murmuring people, they were all nothing to Moses, because his gaze was not fastened on them, but upon something far greater. Nothing but faith could have enabled him to do this, but faith had just this power. For of all things in this world faith is by far the most powerful. Let the world laugh at faith as it will, we are proud of it, and affirm that nothing can match it for deeds accomplished and victories won. In all the world there has never been a man who has had such an influence on the human race as Moses has had, and the underlying secret of his power was not his wisdom, or his cheks, or his any thing, but only his faith in God's word and promise. Had Moses any faults! Yes, certainly; for no man ever lived (with one exception) who was sinless. And it was just for this sin of his that he was not permitted to see the land within its borders. But notice that this sin was just a lack of that faith of which we have been speaking. This marred much which was otherwise perfect. So in the case of many in our days, the lack of a little more faith is all that prevents them from enjoying more than they do in their Christian lives. Because our faith fails, much else comes to naught. Fears come in and possesses our lives and makes them bitter. The future looks dark, we feel that God has forsaken us. Is this so? No, certainly not; but miserable unbelief says it is, and we believe what it says. O for a little more of the faith that Moses had, for then our doubts, and with them our fears, would fice away and we should be at peace.—Rev. A. F. Sesaugiter.

B that misery experienced when we suddenly become aware that we possess a diabolical arrangement called a stomach. The stomach is the reservoir from which every fibre and tissue must be nourished, and any trouble with it is soon felt throughout the whole system. Dyspeptics of active mental power and a bilious temperament are subject to Sick Headache; those, fleshy and phiegmatic have Constipation, while the thin and nervous are abandoned to gloomy forebodings. I. H. QUINN

Has been appointed exclusive agent for the celebrated FLU-HART COAL & MINING CO.'S COAL. This coal stands at the head of the list as one of the finest domestic and steam coals produced. It mines coarser, is harder, will not mash in handling, has much less slack in it. than most Jackson county coals. The tremendous output last year is proof that the coal pleases the trade. Agent for the Hocking No. 6, which is a very fine grate and heating stove coal. Keeps constantly on hand a supply of ANTHRACITE COAL and the best quality of Piedmont Smithing Coal. He handles Oven and Gas Coke.
